OUR STORY

The purpose of the conference “African Americans enrolled in bachelor’s degree programs at four-year institutions graduate at the lowest rates of all other racial and ethnic groups, according to data from the U.S. Department of Education. Specifically, they lag 12.6 percent behind Hispanics and 22.3 percent behind whites; Asians have the highest graduation rate at 71.2 percent. The study looked at the six-year graduation rates of students in four cohorts. Across each group of undergraduates, the six-year graduation rate for black male students attending public colleges and universities was 35 percent, compared with 46 percent for Latino and 59 percent for white male students.

- Changing the Narrative for Men of Color in Higher Education by Lisa McBride

The Black Male Academic Achievement Conference (BMAAC) seeks to improve outcomes for Black Males in Higher Education through networking, development, shared resources and strategies. The BMAAC is about strengthening and building communities of Black Males pursuing Higher Education and those who serve them at the many colleges and universities across the NW region. Our attendees will be:

- Inspired by our dynamic keynote speakers
- Educated by workshop presenters
- Empowered by being connected to a community striving for the same common goal-Success!

SUPPORTING INSTITUTION

We chose the word “Black” to be inclusive of all who identify as “Black” including African American, Afro Latino, Caribbean, African, and more. Though we have a targeted focus on Black Males our conference is inclusive, and all are welcomed.

Who will attend the Conference?

- College Students from across Washington State and the Great Northwest Region
- Faculty and Staff from 2 year and 4 year institutions
- Professionals from across Washington State

“The Urgency of Now” BMAAC conference is offering college and university staff and faculty around the state of Washington and beyond the opportunity to learn best practices from faculty and administrators who challenge the status quo in the service of black male students. Additionally, students will gain skills for academic success in our student workshop. Closing the conference out is a dynamic keynote speaker, who will elevate and challenge those in attendance.

In Addition:

- Market your product or service to attendees
- Increase visibility and name recognition with a new audience
- Reach a prime demographic who has strong buying power
- Meet and serve the community in causes that are important to us all
